Two neighbors died and were buried before I knew it last week. Mrs. Charlotte Luebke, wife of Charles Luebke died suddenly at her home here on Friday evening, Nov. 10 while out feeding her turkeys. She became ill and called for help, soon after being brought in the house, she exclaimed: "I am dying," and in a short while expired. They had been married 47 years and she was 70 years of age.

Ed Crittenden, popularly known as Ed Shoemaker died about the same time in the Los Angeles bastile where he was taken after being found driving without lights near Moneta. He was the son of Mrs. Charles Shoemaker.

Quail hunting brought many Los Angeles hunters out last week and Sunday Mr. Kruger, well known in Palmdale, with a friend and Max Godde Jr., secured several birds as did others, but few got the limit. Mr. Packard and son with a couple of friends were out Sunday and Mr. Packard was the only one that got any birds, the others only got rabbits.

Coming home from Palmdale Saturday night I tried hunting rabbits with the Juggernaut and was successful in getting a nice bunny. He never moved after the wheels hit him.

Charles Little and family of Los Angeles were visitors at the Godde home over the weekend.

The turkey flock at the Earl ranch is growing like weeds. They never suffered from the fatal disease that affected other fowls here about last spring.

The planet Venus riding the tip of the Crescent moon this Monday night was one of the finest heavenly sights ever witnessed.

The leaves are now falling very fast and many orchard trees are bare.

Ed Wolf of Mojave, visited his mother, Mrs. Stratman over Sunday. Ed is mining there but a change of ownership of a group of mines and claims has left him out of work for some time. The new owners are not working any men as yet.

Mrs. Mary Godde lost her brother Fred Weber, of Los Angeles, last Saturday. Mr. Weber was head of the showcase factory of that name on Avalon boulevard. He was 62 years of age. His wife died a few days ago.

The Planet Vulcan

Vulcan is not seen very often and so few astronomer believe in him, but rumor has been handed down from olden times and in the last few centuries he has been seen crossing the sun several times in both France and Germany, also about the time of the Civil War in
